Canva Subscription & Renewal Tracking

How Canva billing works, where invoices go, and how Vendibly tracks it automatically

What Canva is used for

Canva is an online design platform used by small businesses, creators and teams to produce social media graphics, presentations and marketing assets. Many users look for details on Canva Pro billing, Canva subscription renewals, or how to find Canva invoices, so this page summarizes the core information clearly.

How the Canva subscription works

Canva offers free and paid plans, including Canva Pro for individuals and Canva Teams for groups. Paid plans renew automatically and can be billed monthly or annually. Team plans use seat-based pricing, so costs adjust as members are added or removed.

Billing and renewal cycles

Canva bills on a recurring schedule:

- Automatic renewal by default
- Monthly or annual billing options
- Trials convert to paid plans unless cancelled
- Team plans may include prorated charges when seats change

Annual renewals occur once per year as a single charge, which many businesses overlook until the debit posts.

Where Canva sends invoices

Canva sends invoices and payment confirmations to the email address connected to the account owner or billing contact. Emails typically include:

- Plan type
- Charge amount

- Billing period
- Payment date
- Occasionally the next renewal date

These emails are exactly what Vendibly reads to detect and track your Canva subscription.

How Vendibly tracks your Canva subscription

Vendibly automatically detects Canva activity by scanning billing emails in Gmail or Outlook. Once connected, Vendibly:

- Identifies active Canva Pro or Teams subscriptions
- Extracts renewal dates and billing frequency
- Stores invoices in your Vendibly invoice vault
- Adds Canva as a vendor in your dashboard
- Sends renewal reminders before charges occur

Slack Subscription & Renewal Tracking | Billing, Invoices, and How Vendibly Helps

Learn how the Slack subscription works, how billing and renewals are handled, where Slack sends invoices, and how Vendibly tracks Slack subscriptions and renewal dates automatically from Gmail or Outlook.

Slack Subscription & Renewal Tracking

How Slack billing works, where invoices go, and how Vendibly tracks it automatically

What Slack is used for

Slack is a team messaging and collaboration platform used by small businesses, agencies, and startups to organize conversations into channels, share files, and integrate with other tools. Many teams look for clarity on Slack billing, Slack subscription renewals, and how to find Slack invoices, so this page summarizes the essentials.

How the Slack subscription works

Slack offers a Free plan and several paid plans (such as Pro and Business+) that add features like full message history, admin controls, and enhanced security.

Paid Slack plans are subscription based and are billed per active user, on either a monthly or annual billing cycle, with automatic renewal unless you downgrade or cancel. Workspace owners and billing admins can change plans and billing cycles from the Billing section in Slack.

Billing and renewal cycles

Slack uses recurring billing with a "fair billing" model:

- Your first charge occurs on the day you purchase a paid plan.
- Ongoing charges occur on your monthly or annual renewal date, depending on your chosen billing cycle.
- If you pay annually and add new members, extra charges may appear on the last day of the month for the additional seats.
- Paid trials or upgrades convert into recurring subscriptions if not downgraded or cancelled before the end of the trial or billing period.

Slack's billing is based on active users, and updates to their active user calculation apply across paid plans.

Where Slack sends invoices

Slack invoices and billing statements can be accessed in the Billing section of the workspace, and invoices are also emailed to Workspace Owners and any configured billing contacts.

Those invoices typically include:

- Workspace name and plan
- Number of billable users
- Billing period and renewal date
- Charge amount and payment method

These billing emails are exactly what Vendibly uses to detect and track Slack as a vendor.

How Vendibly tracks your Slack subscription

When you connect Gmail or Outlook, Vendibly automatically scans billing and payment emails from Slack and builds a clear Slack subscription record:

- Detects your active Slack paid plan and billing activity
- Extracts renewal dates and billing frequency (monthly or annual)
- Identifies seat-based changes that affect cost
- Stores Slack invoices in your Vendibly invoice vault
- Shows Slack on your vendor dashboard alongside other tools
- Sends reminders before upcoming Slack renewals

You can learn more in the Email Sync and Renewal Calendar sections of Vendibly.
